This year, the Oklahoma Hall of Fame is making available more than $4,000,000 in tuition grants and cash scholarships to high school students who have paid attention in their Oklahoma history classes.

In the Oklahoma Scholarship Competition, students in grades 9 through 12 take a test on Oklahoma history at one of 14 testing sites in the state. Regardless of where students take the test, they compete for scholarships in the county in which they attend school. Those with high scores in each county receive a $1,000 cash scholarship or tuition grant to an Oklahoma college or university. Each of Oklahoma's 77 counties has at least eight scholarships available. Scholarships are made possible through generous donations by individuals, corporations and Oklahoma colleges and universities.

DAVID PAYNE

Following his leading of settlers into Indian Territory in 1880, David Payne published the first newspaper in the Cherokee Outlet.

After moving a printing press from southern Kansas to Rock Falls in the Cherokee Outlet, the first issue of the Oklahoma War Chief was released in 1884. Payne chose this location as he hoped to establish a colony there.

The paper was printed with a circulation of approximately 2,000 from April to August, 1884. On August 7 the U. S. Army confiscated the press in accordance with the Secretary of the Interior's posted order prohibiting the printing of a newspaper in Cherokee Outlet.

A new press was purchased and Payne continued publishing the newspaper in southern Kansas until his death that November. The newspaper was published under different names, including Oklahoma War-Chief and Oklahoma Chief, until August, 1886.

BASS REEVES

Born to slave parents, Bass Reeves worked alongside his parents in the fields as a water boy until he was old enough to become a field hand.

In 1875, Reeves was appointed by Judge Isaac C. Parker as Deputy United States Marshal. Believed to be the first African American deputy marshal commissioned west of the Mississippi River, Reeves served longer than any Deputy U.S. Marshal on record in Indian Territory.

Bass could not read or write, so he memorized something about the individuals he was pursuing to ensure he matched them with the correct warrant. Bass was never wounded in his 27-year career as a Deputy Marshal.

KATE BARNARD

In 1907 Kate Barnard was elected to the position of commissioner of Charities and Corrections. She was the first female to win a statewide elective office in the United States and was elected again in 1911 for a second term.

After learning of mistreatment of Oklahoma prisoners in a Kansas prison, Barnard returned to Oklahoma and recommended all Oklahoma prisoners be brought back to Oklahoma. Following their return she encouraged merit rewards for good behavior of the inmates. She wanted the corrections system to provide every possible incentive for an inmate to improve.

Oklahoma Hall of Fame

In 1927, Clara Waters became the first female warden of an all-male correctional facility in the United States.

Johnny Bench could hold seven baseballs at once in his right hand.

Jerrie Cobb was America's first woman to complete astronaut training and qualify for space flight.

Juanita Kidd Stout was the first African American woman admitted to the Oklahoma Bar and the first to be elected to the bench in the United States.

CHIEF STANDING BEAR

From May through July, 1877, the Poncas were forced to Indian Territory from their home along the banks of the Niobrara River in Nebraska. Along the way, many lost their lives, including the son of Ponca Chief Standing Bear.

In January 1879, 29 Poncas flee Indian Territory with Standing Bear to return to their homeland and bury the Chief's son.

Following the ten-week trip, Standing Bear was arrested. Chief Standing Bear, appearing in Federal Court with his attorneys, told of how the law should be— one law for all men.

The judge agreed and the trial of Standing Bear launched the struggle for equal rights for Native Americans.

EDWARD K. GAYLORD

Edward K. Gaylord came to Oklahoma in 1902 and founded the Oklahoma Publishing Company on January 29, 1903. His leadership included leading the campaign to move the state capitol to Oklahoma City. He battled for passage of the city manager form of government, more air routes through Oklahoma City, was a booster of the Oklahoma City Industrial Foundation, which gave the land for Tinker Air Force Base, and headed the delegation which proposed Turner Turnpike.

He was president and general manager of WKY Television, which he bought as a radio station in 1928. He was the editor and publisher of the The Oklahoman, served as president of the Southern Newspaper Publisher Association, and as director of the Associated Press.

ANGIE DEBO

Angie Debo arrived in a covered wagon and settled in Marshall with her family in 1899. She attended rural one-room schools and received a diploma at age twelve. At sixteen, she began teaching in rural schools at Logan and Garfield counties. She graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1918 and took up historical writing under the influence of Edward Everett Dale.

She served as principal of North Enid and as a history teacher at Enid High School. She received her Master's Degree from the University of Chicago and received her Doctorate from OU. She was the curator of maps at Oklahoma State University until her retirement.

Her contributions as an author include And Still the Waters Run, A History of the Indians of the United States and Oklahoma, Foot-loose and Fancy-free.

META CHESTNUTT SAGER

In the fall of 1889, Sager came to Indian Territory and established a school at Silver City, near the old Chisholm Trail, before she and other townspeople established Minco in 1890. The construction of the Minco Academy was overseen by Sager and became the Sunny South School and church.

With visions of greater education services, Meta inspired the building of a 21-room school house built in the middle of a 10-acre campus. Eventually it became El Meta Bond College, and more than 2,500 students passed through its halls before it closed its doors in 1920.

In 1939, a park was created on ground that was formerly part of the El Meta College and a bronze plaque was placed as a memorial to Sager.

CHIEF FRED LOOKOUT

Fred Lookout was only ten years old when he joined his family and tribe on a 150-mile walk from Kansas to the new Osage Mission, present-day Osage County, on Mission Creek.

After attending boarding school in Pawhuska, he graduated from Carlisle Indian School in Pennsylvania and returned to the Mission where he married, bought a farm, and raised a family at Sand Creek.

He was a member of the Osage Tribal Council, appointed as Assistant Chief, and served as Principal Chief of the Osages. The “spiritual and political leader” of his tribe, Chief Lookout worked tirelessly in his efforts to maintain the property interests and oil leases of his people.

Oklahoma's recorded history began in the 1500s when Spanish explorer Francisco Vasquez de Coronado came through the area that would become this great state on his search for the “Lost City of Gold.”

The land that would become known as Oklahoma was part of the 1803 Louisiana Purchase. Beginning in the 1800s, the Five Civilized Tribes were relocated to Indian Territory, the most recognized being the Cherokee Trail of Tears.

Following the destruction of the Civil War, Oklahoma became a part of the booming cattle industry, ushering in the era of the cowboy. Western expansion reached the territory in the late 1800s, sparking a controversy over the fate of the land. Treaties enacted after the Civil War by the U.S. government forced the tribes to give up their communal lands and accept individual property allotments to make way for expansion. There was talk of using Indian Territory for settlement by African Americans emancipated from slavery. However, the government relented to pressure, much of it coming from a group known as “Boomers,” who wanted the rich lands opened to non-Indian settlement.

By 1856, each of the Five Civilized Tribes established territorial boundaries in the frontier. These were all national domains, not reservations. The Tribes began building cultures out of the Oklahoma wilderness. The Five Civilized Tribes each formed their own constitutional governments and established

Edward Everett Dale

Oklahoma's foremost historian, Edward Everett Dale, was raised in old Greer County and graduated from Central State Teachers College in Edmond in 1909.

A history teacher in Greer County and at the Kiowa-Comanche Reservation, Dale received another degree from the University of Oklahoma in 1911, as well as a master's degree and doctorate from Harvard. He returned to the University of Oklahoma in 1922 as a professor of history and served as chairman of the Department of History from 1924 to 1942 and retired in 1952.

Dale was a member of the Indian survey commission and visited every Indian reservation in the United States.

He also spent his summers teaching at a number of universities. Dale authored many outstanding works including History of Oklahoma, Indians of the Southwest, Tales of the Teepee and his autobiography entitled The West Wind Blows.

advanced public school systems. The nations had powerful judicial systems and strong economies. To protect the nations, the United States Army built several forts, including Fort Washita and Fort Gibson.

The government opened the western parts of the territory to settlers by holding land runs in the late 1800s. Settlers from across the nation and countries like Poland, Germany, and Ireland came to stake their claims. Many African Americans, including former slaves of Indians, took part in the runs and accepted allotments as tribal members.

Oklahoma became the 46th state of the union on November 16, 1907.

HISTORY OF THE OKLAHOMA HALL OF FAME

Founded in 1927, the Oklahoma Hall of Fame was created to honor Oklahomans who had given outstanding service to the state during their lifetime. The organization honors citizens who have performed conspicuous service to the state and humanity with induction into the Oklahoma Hall of Fame. Being inducted into the Oklahoma Hall of Fame is the highest honor one can receive from the state. The Oklahoma Hall of Fame preserves Oklahoma's unique history while promoting pride in our great state.

To date more than 677 accomplished individuals have received the commendation. The names, busts and portraits of the Hall of Fame members can be seen at the Gaylord-Pickens Museum, where information on each member also is available on interactive computers in the Hall of Fame Gallery and on the organization's website, OklahomaHOF.com. In addition, the inductees are recognized on granite monoliths in the Heritage Plaza at the Oklahoma State Fairgrounds.

OKLAHOMA SCHOLARSHIP COMPETITION Study Guide

The following individuals were inducted into the 2015 Oklahoma Hall of Fame class:

Kevin Durant
Jim Halsey
Bill Hancock
Mike Larsen
William J. Ross
Sharen Jester
Turney
Steadman Upham
Francis Tuttle

KEVIN DURANT

A leader on and off the court, Kevin Durant has established himself as a pillar of the Oklahoma community throughout his career with the Oklahoma City Thunder. Durant's on-court resume speaks for itself and includes six All-Star appearances, four scoring titles, one MVP Award, and a trip to the 2012 NBA Finals.

Durant also has illustrated an impressive civic responsibility during his time in Oklahoma. After tornadoes tore through much of Oklahoma in May, 2013, he donated $1 million to the American Red Cross to aide those impacted by the storms before touring the devastation. His community mindedness is also prevalent throughout the year as he attends multiple Thunder community initiatives, including the team's Thunder Fit program, Book Bus, and Holiday assist events.

Prior to being selected with the No. 2 pick in the 2007 NBA Draft, the Suitland, Maryland native spent one season at the University of Texas where he was named the Associated Press National Player of the Year. He also became the first freshman in NCAA history to earn the Wooden and Naismith awards.

After winning the NBA's Rookie of the Year Award in 2008, Durant has helped transform the Thunder into one of the NBA's most winningest franchises. With Durant helping to lead the way, the Thunder has amassed the second best record in the NBA over the last six seasons (.664 winning percentage).

Through the Kevin Durant Charity Foundation, he is enriching the lives of at-risk youth from low-income backgrounds through educational, athletic, and social programs. Trips abroad also have inspired Durant to connect internationally with the next generation leading the game. Through his foundation and in partnership with NIKE, Inc., the "BUILD IT AND THEY WILL BALL" Courts Renovation Initiative will increase the number of high quality basketball courts accessible to underprivileged youth across the United States and internationally. On October 5, 2015, Durant, alongside students and faculty, celebrated the first court renovation in the United States at Oklahoma City's North Highland Elementary.

JIM HALSEY

For more than 60 years, artist manager, agent, and impresario Jim Halsey has been guiding the careers of music legends, including Roy Clark, Hank Thompson, Wanda Jackson, Minnie Pearl, Reba McEntire, Jody Miller, Jana Jae, Brenda Lee, The Judds, Clint Black, Tammy Wynette, Merle Haggard, Dwight Yoakam, Lee Greenwood, Mr. James Brown, Roy Orbison, Leon Russell, Freddy Fender, Jimmy Dean, Conway Twitty, Don Williams, Mel Tillis, Woody Herman, and, for over 40 years, The Oak Ridge Boys.

These stars broadened the international scope of Country Music with their appearances on major television and in movies. His artists not only headlined Las Vegas showrooms, his country artists were the first of the genre to play the strip. Halsey also was the first to book the entire strip at once with his artists. He was the first to present country music at Radio City Music Hall, Madison Square Garden, and Carnegie Hall. His artists have played Royal Albert Hall, the Montreux Jazz Festival, and Wembley. In 1976, he orchestrated a ground breaking cultural and diplomatic tour of the Soviet Union with Roy Clark and The Oak Ridge Boys.

An author and educator, Halsey created a music and entertainment degree program at Oklahoma City University for which he received the Governor's Excellence in Education Award. He is now focused on the introduction of a cutting edge online educational program.

Other awards bestowed on Halsey include the Wembley Award from The International Festivals of Country Music, numerous awards from the Academy of Country Music, the National Music Council's American Eagle Award, the American Legion's Patriot Award, and induction into the International Entertainment Buyer's Association Hall of Fame. Jim Halsey resides in Tulsa, Oklahoma, with his wife Minisa Crumbo Halsey. He is father of the late Sherman Halsey, Gina Halsey, Woody Carter, and Crissy Rumford.

BILL HANCOCK

A Hobart, Oklahoma, native, Bill Hancock has achieved a unique trifecta at the highest echelon of intercollegiate athletics. He was the first full-time director of the NCAA Final Four, the first director of the Bowl Championship Series (BCS), and the first executive director of the College Football Playoff.

After graduating in three and a half years from the University of Oklahoma with a degree in journalism, Hancock served as assistant sports information director for the Sooners before returning home to operate the family newspaper with his brother. He then became assistant commissioner for the Big Eight Conference office before joining the NCAA in 1989. Hancock has served on the U.S. Olympic Committee staff at 11 Olympic Games and two Pan American games.

Hancock is also an accomplished and published author, with two books to his credit. His memoir about his 36-day bicycle journey from Huntington Beach, California, to Tybee Island, Georgia, Riding With the Blue Moth, is his story of overcoming grief and self-reflection. Riding With the Blue Moth was among the top sports books following its release in October, 2005 and was re-issued in 2015. His second book, This One Day in Hobart, is a history of his home town.

Hancock is married to his high school sweetheart, the former Nicki Perry. They have two sons, Nate Hancock and the late Will Hancock. Will died in the Oklahoma State University basketball team's airplane crash in 2001. Bill and Nicki have three grandchildren.

MIKE LARSEN

Born of Chickasaw heritage, award-winning artist Mike Larsen grew up in farming communities in Oklahoma and Texas. He is a student of history, immersing himself in the past events of the subjects he paints and sculpts. Larsen knew early on what he wanted to do with his life and for more than 40 years has been recognized as one of the most admired and respected professional fine artists.

Larsen studied traditional art disciplines, beginning his training at Amarillo Junior College, continuing at the University of Houston, and concluding at the prestigious Arts Student League in New York City. His career began at street fairs and rapidly progressed to nationally known festivals. For more than 20 years now, he has been represented by galleries throughout the United States. In addition to teaching art and opening a studio, he co-founded the 23rd Street handcrafts co-op in Oklahoma City. Most of his time today consists of creating paintings and sculpture commissioned by governments, corporations, and individuals.

His love for painting and sculpting dancing figures began when he was commissioned by the State of Oklahoma to paint a 26-foot long mural for the State Capitol Rotunda of Oklahoma's five Indian prima ballerinas. "Flight of Spirit" was dedicated on November 17, 1991. He has been honored to paint several series of murals for institutions throughout the state of Oklahoma, portraying the history of the state he calls home. Added to his recognition was being chosen by the United States Postal Service to create the Oklahoma Centennial Stamp.

Larsen is married to the former Martha Schroeder and lives in Perkins, Oklahoma. Their union resulted in the blending of their children—Larsen's daughter Katy and Martha's sons Randall and Jeff.

WILLIAM J. ROSS

William J. "Bill" Ross, a native of Oklahoma City and the son and grandson of '89ers, attended Rosary School, Classen High School, and the University of Oklahoma, where he earned his bachelor's and law degrees. He was an Oklahoma City Assistant Municipal Counselor until joining the law firm Rainey, Flynn, Green and Anderson in 1960. He became senior partner in 1975 and the firm was renamed Rainey, Ross, Rice & Binns.

Since 1982 he has served as chairman of Inasmuch Foundation and Ethics and Excellence in Journalism Foundation, founded by Edith Kinney Gaylord. Ross served as attorney for Ms. Gaylord, as well as her father, E.K. Gaylord, and her brother, Edward L. Gaylord.

His honors include an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma City University, Oklahoma City Public Schools Wall of Fame, University of Oklahoma College of Law Order of the Owl, and Beaux Arts King. He served as co-chairman of the Board of Visitors of the University of Oklahoma College of Law and headed the building campaign raising $15 million.

Ross was a director of United Energy Resources, PetroUnited Terminals, Hadson Petroleum, Clinton and Oklahoma Western Railroad, and First Interstate Bank of Oklahoma. He chaired the Bicentennial Committee for the Oklahoma Hall of Fame, ensuring the state's replica of the Liberty Bell reached students in each of Oklahoma's 77 counties.

He is a member of Christ the King Catholic Church. He is married to the former Mary Lillian "Lil" Ryan. With Lil he is the father of three adult children and four grandchildren.

SHAREN JESTER TURNEY

Sharen Jester Turney was born and raised in Ardmore, Oklahoma, where she learned the value of hard work and love for community. Those values have served as the foundation of her business success and philanthropic commitment.

Turney earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Business Education with a minor in Public Relations from the University of Oklahoma and is an inductee in the university's Business of Education Hall of Fame. Following graduation she joined the renowned Foley's Department Store management program. She continued her retail career at Byer California, Federated Department Stores, and Neiman Marcus before joining L Brands and Victoria's Secret in 2000. She was named president and CEO of Victoria's Secret Direct and soon led the catalogue and e-commerce platform to a memorable milestone—surpassing the billion dollar mark. In 2006 she became president and CEO of the entire Victoria's Secret brand, including Victoria's Secret Stores, Victoria's Secret Direct, Victoria's Secret Lingerie, Victoria's Secret PINK, and Victoria's Secret Beauty. Her keen merchant eye, analytical skills, and marketing sophistication have been instrumental in growing the brand. During her tenure profit has more than doubled and she has led the company to a record $7 billion dollars in sales.

With hearts for giving, through the Turney Family Foundation, she, her husband Charles, and son Matthew have provided more than $2 million in support for organizations with a focus on cancer research and children's causes. Advocates of higher education, the Turney family has provided scholarship funds to the University of Oklahoma, Eastern Oklahoma State College, and Southeastern Oklahoma State University. Turney is the recipient of the Hug Award, an honor given to individuals in the fashion industry "with a heart" and received the Dr. Catherine White Achievement Award from HeartShare Human Services.

Turney currently serves as chairman of the board for the Research Institute at Nationwide Children's Hospital and serves on the Jay H. Baker Retailing Initiative Advisory Board at The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania.

Educational opportunities annually offered by the Oklahoma Hall of Fame include:

More than $4,000,000 in tuition grants and scholarships to high school students.

Heritage Week competitions for students in grades 3 through 12.

FREE Field trips to the Gaylord-Pickens Museum—voted Nickelodeon’s Parents’ Choice Best Pick for Teens.

“I Am Oklahoma” program for students of all ages.

STEADMAN UPHAM

Steadman Upham served as the 17th president of The University of Tulsa from 2004 to early 2012. Just a few months later, in October, he returned as the 19th president. Highlights of his administration include the addition of nearly 40 academic programs, including doctoral programs in chemistry, physics, and anthropology; the creation of interdisciplinary research institutes in fields including nanotechnology and bioinformatics; the completion of a $700 million fundraising campaign; the addition of approximately 700,000 square feet of campus facilities; the launch of the College of Health Sciences through a partnership with the University of Oklahoma; an agreement with the City of Tulsa whereby the University of Tulsa manages Gilcrease Museum; construction of the Helmerich Center for American Research at Gilcrease Museum; and the opening of the Henry Zarrow Center for Art and Education in downtown Tulsa.

Upham is known for the culture of community service engagement that he has created and fostered. The University of Tulsa’s True Blue Neighbors initiative in the Kendall-Whittier neighborhood includes youth mentoring, tutoring, food and clothing drives, home maintenance assistance, and close partnerships with neighborhood schools. The university and the neighborhood have become one.

Upham, who completed a doctorate in anthropology at Arizona State University, is a widely respected and published archaeologist and previously served as president and chief executive officer of Claremont Graduate University. He and his wife, Peggy, were married in 1971 and have two children and one grandchild.

FRANCIS TUTTLE

Born in 1920 on a small farm in Wellston, Oklahoma, Francis Theodore Tuttle became the architect of Oklahoma’s Career & Technology Education System. In the early 1960s he determined that Oklahoma was not meeting the needs of all children as many were falling by the wayside.

His concerns led him to develop a bold vision for a system that would provide services to high school and adult students, as well as businesses, which would directly secure the state’s economic future. Governors and key stakeholders embraced his philosophy. With his supporters, Tuttle evaluated what was and was not working in vocational systems across the country. He was determined that Oklahoma was going to do it better than any other state.

Tuttle’s passion to make a difference in the lives of young people led him and his supporters to persuade citizens of Oklahoma to pass State Question 434 in 1966 to amend the Oklahoma Constitution to provide for the creation of a Career Tech system. Citizens in local school districts voted to increase their ad valorem taxes to form area vocational-technology school districts, known today as technology centers.

Tuttle, who served as director of the State Department of Vocational and Technical Education in Oklahoma from 1967 until his retirement in 1986, distinguished himself internationally as an innovator and pacesetter in vocational education. He realized that a positive relationship between industry and education was vital for the success of both, as well as providing for a strong and diverse economic infrastructure. His progressive ideas about vocational education helped Oklahoma become a model for other states to follow.
